The idea of developing the police em ployment bureau plan to this extent originated with Inspector John O'Brien Two weeks ago he had a list passed in this district for the signatures of small shopkeepers and landlords who would promise to pay a dime a week for men who would be assigned to sweep, handle who would be assigned to sweep, handle ash cans, and perform other services.

As soon as he got enough subscribers so that the weekly revenue from the four streets surrounding one block would amount to $10 or thereabouts he assigned to the work a jobless family man who lived in the neighborhood. In this way Inspector O'Brien built up fifty jobs and expects to have several more.

His example was followed by Inspector Dwyer, who has been covering the three precincts which he controls a block at a time. Some of the men who started to work when $10 a week was pledged made $14 or $15 = their first week by washing windows and doing errands in addition to their regular duties.
